

Art for Week 9

MAA Grades 6-8

It's flower season! I love my flowers! However, the ONE flower that seems to bloom everywhere, yes the ONE flower I hate to see is the dreaded dandelion! And my, how well it blooms! ☹️ I mow them down (but they just bend over and pop back up again!), I tear one out (and two grow back in its place)...basically, grrrrrrrr! THEN they have the nerve to go to seed and blow all over the place, causing my allergies to flare up!

However, this video shows a way for you to create a picture of dandelions that are, unlike the ones in my yard, absolutely beautiful! You will need heavy dark-coloured paper, white paint of some kind (the video uses poster paint, but you can substitute...AND it doesn't really have to be white), and the rest of the items like toilet paper rolls, scissors and q-tips are readily available in your homes...now go ahead! Make me see the beauty in those dreaded dandelions!
